Excitement in Ireland

DUBLIN, November 26. The Irish Times (conservative) says the government has resolved to promptly suppress all anti-rent and other illegal combinations, to curtail license of the press to forcibly suppress intimidation, to enforce laws governing the process for collection of debts, to prohibit all meetings called for certain purposes, and to arrest certain prominent agitators of anti-rent policy. The Times also says it is reported that troops have been sent to different points in the country where action against anti-rent agitation is imminent.

John Dillon has been summoned to appear in court Monday next and show cause why criminal information should not be sworn against him for sentiments he recently expressed in a speech encouraging tenants to follow the example of those on the Clanricarde estates in County Galway. Dillon in this speech advocated general submission to eviction rather than pay rents as the best means for bringing landlords of Ireland to terms with the occupiers of lands in Ireland. The speech which Dillon proposed to complete was delivered at Woodford October 18.

Sir Michael Hicks Beach, chief secretary for Ireland, has been busily engaged all day at Dublin castle, conferring with legal and military authorities. The city is agitated by rumors of the wildest character relating to the government's intentions.

A great meeting of nationalists called to assemble in the suburb of Irishtown Sunday will, it is thought, be prohibited. Officials of the Irish national league do not appear to be disturbed. They are all pursuing their avocations in their ordinary ways, and all of them say they have no idea of what the government has decided to do, if it has decided anything.

DUBLIN, November 26.—The government has proclaimed the national league meeting called to assemble at Sligo. This action coupled with the prosecution of John Dillon is causing most intense excitement throughout Ireland.

Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien attended a meeting of Lord Dillon's tenants to-night. They urged tenants to firmly resist all attempts to compel them to pay unjust rents. Dillon had intended to speak at other meetings, and it is expected he will continue to fill his engagements before he returns to Dublin. On his return he will probably give bail for trial and thus compel the government to prove the illegality of his action at the Longford and Mutrose meetings. The government has ordered that all taverns in Sligo be closed on Sunday. The National League meeting was prohibited because the magistracy believed that it was intended to intimidate jurors at the coming assizes. The military is called on to disperse all gatherings. Nationalists are excited over this state of affairs and say they will give a banquet to Dillon and other speakers in lieu of holding the meeting. After the meeting of Lord Dillon's tenants to-night Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien remained until a late hour receiving deposits from tenants in consequence of Lord Dillon's refusal to grant a reduction of 25 per cent. It is rumored that United Ireland has been warned.

DUBLIN, November 26. Nationalists have decided to hold meetings in different parts of Sligo, Galway and Tipperary in order to evade the government's prohibition. The Dublin Telegraph says that orders have been sent to Athlone to keep 100 cavalry and 200 infantry in readiness for duty. It is rumored that the object is to arrest trustees appointed under the United Ireland plan to whose charge rents of loyal tenants have been committed.

American Notified.

LINCOLN, Neb., November 26.—President John Fitzgerald, of the Irish National League of America, has to-day received the following important cable from the Honorable Timothy Harrington, member of parliament, secretary of the league in Ireland:

DUBLIN, November 26, 1880,

To John Fitzgerald, Lincoln, Neb:

The government in prosecuting John Dillon, M. P., and proclaiming public meetings admits its inability to govern Ireland without coercion. We will not flinch.

Gas Explosion in a Mine

WILKESBARRE, Pa., November 26. Shortly after the miners and laborers entered Conyngham No. 1 this morning explosion of gas took place. Between twenty and thirty miners are said to be burned and seriously injured, but none are reported dead. But very little information regarding the accident can be learned as yet, as the men are still in the pit, but will be removed as soon as possible. This shaft is known to contain considerable gas and is owned and operated by the Delaware and Hudson company.

The explosion occurred in a shanty at the foot of the shaft, which was occupied by the fire boss. No work was done yesterday and consequently there was a larger quantity of gas than usual in the shaft. The men are now being removed from the pit and taken to their homes or the hospital. It is thought all will recover.

LATER.—The accident in the Conyngham shaft occurred while the men were getting ready to work. About fifty men were sitting at the foot of the shaft awaiting the inside boss when the explosion occurred, and only three or four men escaped without injury. It is known that several, possibly twelve or fifteen, will die. The others will be scarred and maimed for life. The disaster was caused by Cornelius Boyd, a miner laborer, who stepped into a worked out chamber, which was filled with gas, with a lighted lamp upon his hat. Boyle will die. Many mules were killed and wounded and the damages to the inside workings of the shaft are great. The fire bosses, William Williams and William Evans, are fatally burned. There is great excitement in and about the shaft and full knowledge as to the exact number of those hurt, and the character of the wounds of those injured cannot be obtained at present.

WILKESBARRE, November 26.—The explosion was the most serious that has occurred in the anthracite fields this year. It is now known that forty-two men are severely burned and others slightly injured. Twelve of the men will die of their injuries. The scene at the colliery when the injured men were being taken from the shaft was terrible. A crowd of 700 persons had gathered at the mouth of the shaft, among them the wives, mothers and daughters of the injured men. As they were taken out of the pit they were brought to the engine house, and the women made desperate efforts to gain entrance. Frantic demonstrations of grief were made by the women while the blackened and bleeding victims of the disaster were wrapped in blankets and taken away. The door of the engine house was covered with writhing human forms, so disfigured by fire as to be unrecognizable. As fast as possible they were taken to the hospital or to their homes, and so rapidly was the work done that by nine o'clock all had been taken out and carried away.

Cleveland's Party

NEW YORK, November 26.—Henry George's progressive democratic party is requiring every one that joins the party in Boston and New Haven to take the following pledge. The same formula will be used in all cities where the party effects no organization.

Article XII, obligation: Section 1.—Every person admitted as a member of this organization shall be introduced to the president and requested to raise his right hand while repeating these words: "I (giving name), do hereby declare and do approve of the declaration of principles upon which this progressive democratic party, a political organization, has been founded. I pledge my word of honor that while a member of the party in any assembly district or in any part of the United States to abide by the decision of the majority but I will do faithful work on any committee to which I may be appointed, that I promise if possible on election day to devote at least four hours to the duty of manning the polls; that I will use all legitimate means to procure votes for our candidate; that I will report to the committee or organization any evidence of treachery that may appear in our ranks; that my personal conduct will be such as to add dignity to the political party which I at this night join. I will attend the meetings of this organization unless prevented by sickness and other causes over which I have no control. All these things I pledge myself to do, in the belief that by the success of establishment of the principles represented by our party will come the rule, first of all who labor and the downfall of corrupt political parties, which between them now rule this country."

Stock Yards at St. Louis.

DENVER, November 26.—Ex-governor John L. Routt, chairman of the first national cattle convention at St. Louis, and one of the largest cattle owners in the state, returned to the city to-day from a several weeks' visit to his ranch. He gives unqualified endorsement of the movement for cattlemen's stock yards at St. Louis. The idea originated with him a year ago at the international convention in this city, and he says it only requires union of range interests to make it a success, involving an increase of ten to fifteen dollars a head to the producers without increasing the price to consumers.

Bulgarian Efforts

SOFIA, November 26.—Agitation has been started for the purpose of securing the nomination of Prince Emanuel Vogrides, nephew of Aleko Pasha, to the Bulgarian throne. The prince is a Russophile. The sobranje will send a deputation of Bulgarian notables to Vienna, St. Petersburg, Berlin, London, Paris, Rome and Constantinople to fully explain to the powers the actual condition of affairs in Bulgaria and to ask the powers to make their choice of a candidate for the Bulgarian throne, with due regard to the country's needs and disposition. The deputation will start on the mission next week and will visit Vienna first.

Editor Dawson's Appointment.

DENVER, November 26.—Thomas F. Dawson, editor of the Times, has received an appointment as secretary of the senate committee on mines and mining and will leave on Tuesday for Washington, expecting to remain there during the winter. He will return to Denver after the senate adjourns and resume his position on the Times. During his absence Henry L. Baldwin will have charge of the editorial columns of the paper.

Passenger Agents' Agreement

CHICAGO, November 26.—At to-day's session of the San Francisco Passenger association the proposed new agreement was discussed at length. The result was the appointment of a committee consisting of Messrs. Stubbs, Hurlbert, McCill, White and Daniels to confer with absent representatives of interested lines with a view to obtaining their vote upon the propositions submitted. It was decided that the agreement of October 25, adopted at the San Francisco meeting, should be continued in force until December 6, pending consideration of the proposed agreement. The meeting will be in session again to-morrow.

SERVICES OF THANKS.

Thanksgiving Day Observed in an Appropriate Manner.

Services Held at the Methodist and Episcopal Churches.

Revs. Kistler and Merrill Deliver Interesting Discourses.

There was a very large audience present at the Thanksgiving services at the Methodist church that day morning. On the platform were the Revs. Moore, Gregg, Scott, Norton, Peck, Merrill and Black. Rev. A. G. Peck, pastor of the church, presided and delivered the invocation. After singing hymn 110 of the Methodist hymnal Rev. W. M. Scott, pastor of the Southern Methodist church, read a passage of scripture at the conclusion of which Rev. B. F. Moore of the Cumberland Presbyterian church offered prayer. The choir of the church then rendered an appropriate anthem, followed by the singing of hymn 1100. Rev. George E. Merrill of the Baptist church then delivered the following discourse, taking as his text the 36th verse of the 9th chapter of Matthew.

But when he saw the multitudes he was moved with compassion on them because they fainted and were scattered abroad as sheep having no shepherd.

These words introduce us to no special scene in our Lord's ministry. It is not one of the calm, long, summer days when He has been walking the dusty highway, and comes at the noon-time to some well-side, or at evening to a secluded home, where He teaches inquiring souls concerning the heavenly kingdom. It is not the story of one of those desert pilgrimages where He goes away for prayer and rest, but is followed by the crowd who seek His miracles. It is none of those marvellous pictures, but rather the whole combination of them, the great rose window, by which our whole house of worship is lighted to-day. It is the general course of His life, the broad ministry of all the days, the whole trend of His mind and spirit and service.

Jesus went about all the cities and villages teaching in their synagogues and preaching the gospel of the kingdom and healing every sickness and every disease among the people. This was the work to divided hours, for many or for few, or for one. "But when he saw the multitudes" then He was overwhelmed with pity. It may have been with every assembling of a crowd swayed by impulse and fickle as water, it may have been when in His observation of human woes, the sum aggregate of the ravages of sin seemed too awful for contemplation; it may have been a solemn hour of retirement, where His thoughts departed from the healing of one leper, or the cure of one demoniac or the forgiveness of one sinner to dwell upon the world's guilt and to foresee the long centuries of conflict between good and evil, so that those cities and villages on the shores of Galilee became only the representatives of the myriad cities in which His name was yet to be preached, as the name of the Saviour, "But when He saw the multitudes," the great, swaying, pushing, busy, fickle, thoughtless multitudes, content with evil and passing things and losing the best life, He was filled with compassion and compared them to a scattered flock of sheep that had no shepherd to guide them to the fold. Christ's compassion is the subject for our thoughts this morning. Compassion always implies suffering. Suffering does not always imply compassion. Alas that it should be so! But it may safely be said that suffering always—with never a failure calls forth divine compassion. Even the natural and deserved results of sin evoke God's pity. Man's pity is often wanting, but God's pity always goes forth to suffering. Not a pain of soul or body, not a sigh from the lips, not a tear from the eye but God feels pity. The great wants that are wholly unexpressed God knows. More than this. Our text leads us to the knowledge that the wants that are not even known by those who have them, the wants of which men are ignorant but which are nevertheless real and deadly, find a compassion from the divine heart, when no other heart is or could be stirred. How do we know all this? Simply from Christ. Simply from the testimony of the inspired concerning Him as the revealer of God. You find Him looking into the hearts of men and showing them, what they did not dream of before—their utter desolation and dreariness, when judged by the right standards, their sinfulness and guilt and death and that there is a life whose first principles they have never known. The psalmist prays, both to be delivered from presumptuous sins and to be freed from the secret faults. Of the two the latter are probably more likely to destroy men. Not often, comparatively, do men sin against known law and established custom; but all men have the seeds of moral disease in them. Not often will a man court death by rousing the attack of a wild beast, that shall tear his body to pieces. That would be the presumptuous sin against his physical life. But every hour, thousands of men are dying as the result of insidious attacks of disease, hereditary or otherwise continued. Well might the Psalmist pray to be delivered from the secret faults, that were destroying his moral being and entailing a daily suffering and danger. Man does not know the cause of much of his woe. But a divine mind knows the cause, and pities the woe, as we know from the Christ, who had command of the demons in the spirit, as well as of the fevers in the blood. Why did Jesus come into this world at all? What was the very object of His mission? To show the world its sin on the one hand and its God on the other. To awaken from a fatal sleep and to show the remedy for the disease. To convince the world of its real guilt, which could never be wiped out by any amount of propitiatory sacrifice that man could offer, and to reveal God as a Father, which needed no propitiatory except as it was expressed by the sacrifice He was ready to offer. Pity for sorrow, compassion for disaster, forgiveness for sin—these were in Jesus and were the one purpose of His coming, to such as all—that He might declare to them that God was love.

But I want to point out to you more fully how this great pity of God in Jesus Christ differs from human compassion in that it was no mere sentiment, but full of action, full of lively value to men. And I would show you, too, how in the methods that Christ adopted there were at once the instantaneous personal help that was needed, and also the large, far-reaching, definite, eternal principles which alone could pass beyond the mere individual case of suffering to redeem a world. Christ was no vain dreamer, no sentimentalist, no enthusiast, whose feelings gushed but ended with that gush. His life was a beautiful, strong fountain indeed, but it was a stream that turned the mill wheels that ground corn for men. He did not content himself with a comfortable seat in the synagogue wondering why the poor troubled sinners would not come in there and learn about God. He went to talk with the publican at his own table, with the sinful woman at Samaria at Jacob's well, and with the disciples on the stormy lake. He came down from a mountain of glory to cast a demon out of a boy and he journeyed far to carry comfort and joy to the bereaved home of Bethany. A comfortable home, he renounced. What property did he own but the robe and sandals that he wore? Personal ease, comfort, emolument, life itself were as nothing to Him, if only His pity might work for men.

I must speak now of the method of His charity. The help he gave was given at once. Then it was given directly by Him to the sufferer, and to every sufferer who applied and who could rightly be helped. For a third characteristic of this benefactor's action was that it was not inconsiderate and indiscriminate but He probed every sham and turned it away without the blessing, but, when a cry of real distress went up to Him how long did it take to move His heart and bring forth the word of comfort or the deed of power?

He was not content to save an individual, His mission could not stop with the laying of His hand upon a dead child or, with His declaring forgiveness to a Mary or with His calling a Peter out of the narrowness of a fishing boat into the broad life of an apostle. The pity of Jesus was so great that it must deal with principles, it must go below results, it must pass beyond local and temporary ills, it must cover all the world. The surgeon who treats your wound and heals the ravages of the battle does a great deed of mercy. He will do a greater who succeeds in establishing such an international code of laws that war itself shall be prevented and men shall find some more rational way of settling their disputes than by hacking and shooting each others' bodies. God looks beneath the mere ravages of sin to find the sin itself. God sees that the pang of conscience is a pang indeed, but necessary and desirable as a prompter against violating that conscience and Christ seeks to remove the cause of the pang instead of the pang itself. He would take the gout away that makes the pang.

We learn just this lesson about our own philanthropies, our own charities. There are two ways of helping the wretched. One is, to relieve the immediate want, and this should always be done, kindly, judiciously, in the spirit of Jesus. The other way is to so educate the debased, so infuse into them a self-respect, that they shall endeavor to help themselves. Give them right ideas. Love them a self confidence. Give them a responsibility little at first, greater afterwards. Lift them out of the rank of beggars in their own estimation, and you have gone a long way to destroy real poverty and make these persons who are all the time knocking at the door of society for aid, helpful to society themselves. This is clearly seen now, and in all our large cities the organizations for charitable purposes are associating themselves together and private benefactions are becoming more and more absorbed in these united efforts, just because private benefactions are in five cases out of six supporting pauperism by systematic beggary, when if this pernicious encouragement of pauperism is withheld the beggars themselves will seek employment or readily accept it if found for them.

Now these are no new principles at all. They are just the method of Christ's procedure. They are as old as our era, and, tested in every century and decade of it, have never been found wanting. Make the man better; then you make his circumstances better. Give him right principles; his life will testify to your wisdom. Do not be content to lop off the top leaves of the cumbering vine; dig the vine up by the roots and burn it in the fire, and let the tree have the air and the soil for itself. Above all is it so in morals. Jesus knew what was in man and He knew the way to deliver man. So He did not suffer the intense sympathy of the moment to dim the truth and put it out of sight. He said "Ye must be born again." To give your soul comfort for the moment is not enough. You must be comforted with the real blessing of God's own life. The old evil must be dug up by the roots; the new good must go all through you and be a part of your very being. Repentance must be true. Belief must be hearty. Commitment to God must be thorough and complete.

It is by these great principles that God's compassion works for the world. Through the spirit of truth and through the establishment of great principles, Christ lays hold of men, and so regenerates nations, races, the world. He saw the multitude. Not merely the Jews. Certain Greeks came seeking Him, and he said, "The hour has come, that the Son of Man should be glorified." His glory was in His shining forth beyond His own people to all other nations. He was filled with compassion. Jew and Greek and Roman must learn of Him! His spirit and the truth He had to teach must come to all. And with majestic confidence He could wait and He could die, for the seed would fructify and fill the whole earth. What wonders has this divine compassion done through the ages! The old nations are no more. On their ruins has arisen the Christian world. The old horrors of society have been done away; in place of them we have the love and purity of home, the prosperity of protected labor, the uncounted mercies of man to man where once only cruelties were practiced. Women and children are no longer the prey of savage invaders, nor the slaves of domestic tyranny. Education, enlightment, civilization, culture are making the most of the powers of man, and are dominating the earth. Modern missions are meeting with unprecedented success, and hundreds and thousands of souls, whole tribes in a day, are turned to God. Christ is gone into the heavens, but the truth, the principles, and the Holy Spirit are still working the work of His compassion upon the multitudes.

You sometimes hear an opposing statement, and the assertion is published, that the world is growing worse instead of better, and that the pity of the Lord, instead of saving, is losing all the time the treasures of immortal souls. But it is not so. The cross of Christ is the power of God. I am not sure that the statement recently made by a distinguished thinker is correct, that already Buddhism has lost the leading place in the list of religions, and that Christianity numbers more adherents Emperor William's speech at the opening of the reichstag on Thursday was decidedly peaceful. He has been watching France, however, and does not propose to be caught napping. The improved feeling in stocks shows how much the peace of Europe depends on the life of this old man of 90, whose friendship for the czar has been so powerful in averting general war.

The tory government of England has inaugurated a new regime in Ireland. The first step was the dismissal of Sir Roger Hamilton from the post of under-secretary at Dublin. The new policy will recognize no appeals for abatement of rents and no efforts to obtain concession; will gag the press, prohibit meetings of the league and threatens with the prison the leaders of the people. Dillon, who has been selected for the first victim, offended by advising submission to eviction rather than pay excessive rents. A season of coercion appears to be the promise of the immediate future, and much cannot be expected of the government's plan to be proposed to parliament, which meets in February.

The Daily News of Greenville, S. C., on the counting out of Smalls, confesses the fraud on all counts in the following paragraph: "The republican newspapers and politicians are given a strong case, and they will make the most of it. They will charge that we have carved the state into districts on curious lines and by dividing counties thrown the colored vote into one district, and, not content with that, have gone into that district and stolen their one representative. They will not only charge it, but they will prove it. Our side may and doubtless will prove that the county boards acted within the law in throwing out many boxes and hundreds of votes for irregularities, but the fact will stand out bold and unquestioned that Smalls has been defeated by the official negligence of democratic officials appointed by democratic authority. The inference that the negligence was a prearranged plot to deprive the majority of its weight will be too plain and clear for resistance." The disfranchisement of the republican voters in the south will be a live topic in coming sessions of congress, and the Smalls case will be the text for powerful appeals. Many will be anxious to know why ten or eleven thousand voters in South Carolina should have a representative in congress when three to six times as many are required in the north.

The Rev. Dr. Burroughs, elected to be professor of Biblical History and Interpretation and college pastor at Amherst, is the son of the Rev. G. W. Burroughs, of Philadelphia, and was graduated at Princeton in 1873.

Thiers and Guizot once met on neutral ground, the latter being prime minister and the former leader of the opposition. "But, M. Thiers," said Guizot, in course of political argument, "you and your friends do nothing but criticise us. What would you do if you were in power in our places?" "We would sing the same song you are singing," replied Thiers, "only, we would sing it better."

Emperor William for Peace.

BERLIN, November 25. The reichstag was opened to-day by Herr Von Boetugeher, minister of the interior, who read the speech from the throne in which the emperor says the object and policy of the empire which enjoys peaceful relations with all states is exerted in favor of the maintenance of concord among all the powers by the influence which accrues to Germany from her love of peace, and from the universal confidence that is reposed in the empire owing to the fact that Germany is not concerned in the pending questions and from the emperor's close friendship with the two neighboring courts.

The emperor's speech announces that a measure will be introduced to raise the effective strength of the German army, which he says is justified by the increasing armies of the neighboring states. The measure, he says, is indispensable to German security. The resources required will be raised by increasing the matriculatory contributions, and applying them to the public credit.

The pacific tone of the speech has strengthened the Bourse, and there was a large buying to-day of Austrian, Russian and Hungarian securities. It is expected that the Septennate bill, when it is presented in the reichstag, will be immediately referred to a commission of twenty-one members, thus postponing the critical debate on the measure until January.

TARGET PRACTICE.

The Cavalry Company's Regular Semi-Annual Shoot

At nine o'clock Thursday morning the members of the First Separate Troop cavalry assembled at their armory and from thence repaired to the range west of the Monument where the regular semi annual shoot occurred. The company was divided into three classes, A, B and C, and five shots each at 100 and 200 yards respectively were allowed each member. The following are the scores made by each member in the respective classes:

CLASS A.

	100 yds	200 yds	Total
F. Lowther	20	17	37
Nels Johnson	17	15	32
R. O. Kimball	15	[illegible]	27

H. D. Johnson	3	6	9
T. Michae	11	11	22
J. J. Lidstone	11	11	22
C. S. Kitner	17	15	30

There being ties in classes B and C for first place, lots were drawn resulting in favor of Messrs. Southcottee and Tibbits respectively. Mr. F. Lowther having the highest score, received the company medal. Mr. J. C. St. John won the silver cup in class A. Mr. George B. Southcott the silver cup in class B, and Mr. A. R. Tibbits the silver cup in class C. Mr. H. D. Johnson having made the lowest score was accorded the leather medal.

In the evening a ball was given under the auspices of the company which was largely attended and thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Sea Coast Defence

WASHINGTON, November 26.—In his annual report to the secretary of war Brigadier General Duane, chief of engineers, says: During the past year operations at sea coast and lake frontier defenses have been restricted to those necessary for the preservation and repair of existing works. The subject of a defensive system of the country so far as regards ports at which fortifications or other defences are most urgently required is sufficiently treated in an elaborate report made to congress by the fortifications board, showing the nearly defenseless condition of our sea coasts and lake frontiers. General Duane expresses the belief that failure of congress to make appropriation for this all important work has mainly arisen from the difficulty in determining the best method of procuring armor plate. He says preparation of sites, construction of masonry foundations, building of mortar batteries, a work equally necessary with that of procuring armor, will demand much time, and it is earnestly recommended that funds be at once appropriated for emplacements of turrets and casemates for rifled batteries for twelve inch rifled mortars and for submarine mines, all which can be accomplished before armor plate will be required. Estimates submitted aggregating $1,0[illegible],000 are based upon the present defensive system of our sea-coast. The amount is estimated as necessary for the preservation and repair of fortifications, being required to prevent such modern batteries as we now have from going to ruin and maintain the old works. Attention is called to estimates for torpedoes. For the present, it is said, our principal reliance for harbor defense in case of war must rest upon fixed mines, and it is very necessary that there should be a full supply of these on hand at the principal seaports of the nation. Owing to the failure of congress to make appropriations it has become necessary not only to suspend torpedo experiments but also to a great extent practical instruction of engineer troops in details of this service. These experiments have been in prosecution for some years and the system of fixed mines has been developed until it bids fair if funds are available to reach the highest point of excellence. Touching the work of river and harbor improvement, the report says, funds with which those works were prosecuted during the fiscal year ending June 30 were, owing to failure of congress to make appropriations, derived mainly from such balances as remained on hand from the appropriation made for the year 1884.

Whitney's Axe at Work

WASHINGTON, November 26. Secretary Whitney has issued an order for the discharge of all employes in civil establishments in the Washington navy yard, with the exception of a foreman and clerk for each department of the yard. The Star to-night says: When the secretary issued his order turning the yard over to the ordnance bureau and directing the discharge of employes in the department abolished by the order advantage was taken of the provision for keeping enough force to pack up the goods of the different branches and to retain civil establishments in the various departments. The work of packing up will be done hereafter by employing laborers, the secretary not believing in retaining clerks, watchmen and messengers for laborers' work. A dozen employes under the bureau of yards and docks and about thirty under the steam engineering bureau will be included in the discharges, as well as employes under bureaus which have been abolished.

COMMON SENSE

Xmas Presents

Persons, in thinking over what they wish to buy for Christmas presents, should bear in mind that there is nothing that would be more acceptable or better appreciated by men or boys, than some article of wearing apparel. A suit of clothes, overcoat, shoes or a hat from a mother or father or uncle would be ever appreciated, and a dressing gown, silk handkerchiefs, neckwear or gloves from a young lady to her brother, or sweetheart would be very appropriate. We have all these things ready for your order.

Our system of filling orders by mail is so perfected that non-resident patrons can trade with us by letter as satisfactorily as if in person. Goods sent C. O. D. subject to examination before taking from express office.

We have every kind of garment worn by the male sex—Men's suits, boys' suits, men's and boys' hats, shoes, underwear and all kinds of furnishings, while our prices are invariably the lowest.

Catalogue of styles and prices sent free on application. Our rules of self measurement, if obeyed, will insure perfect fits.

Remarks [illegible] That Line

[illegible] upon the globe, but it is [illegible] would have [illegible] It is [illegible] that in the last eighty years has [illegible] increase of nominal Christianity [illegible] than the whole 1800 years preceding." In the year 500 there were about [illegible] million nominal Christians, in the year 1000 there were [illegible] 000, in the year 1500 there were 100 000 000 in the year 1800 there were 200 000 000 but in 1880 there were 411 000 000 Take our own country. I read a little while ago the extraordinary charge that the churches in the United States are not increasing in numbers in proportion to the increase of our population the population really growing four times as fast as the church membership, that in all civilization skeptics are increasing more rapidly than the church members and the article was filled with the most dreadful forebodings in consequence Nor did this pessimism appear in some sensational sheet it was the utterance of one of our most brilliant and thoughtful semi-religious journals The trouble is the facts are not as stated In our land the churches are growing much faster than the population notwithstanding the vast influx of foreigners upon our shores In 1800 there was one evangelical Christian for fourteen and a half of the inhabitants of all [illegible], in 1850, one for every five. It is an astonishing and grateful fact that in the last census it is [illegible] the evangelical church membership is one fifth of the whole population In those eighty years the inhabitants increased [illegible] fold, but the communicants in the churches increased twenty seven fold Some one may be disposed to give thanks for this on the ground that the Romanists are growing much faster in proportion to the population and that dangers of [illegible] may also be from this But here again the facts are in opposition Romanism makes a distinction between its church members and its population Its own estimate of the number in 1850 was 1,614 000 In 1880 it was 6,367,330 an increase of 475 330 in thirty years In the same period, however, 1 800,000 Roman Catholic immigrants entered the country—more than the denominational increase But in this period of most rapid increase of this church, since 1850, there has been in numbers of evangelical membership so large that there is a difference of more than 1,000,000 in favor of the latter

As for the growth of skepticism can you believe for one moment that it is increasing more rapidly than belief? In this age of faith, in these years of Christian activity and intelligence, now when the Bible is studied as never before, now when [illegible] [illegible] the highest attainments [illegible] [illegible] indefatigable [illegible] [illegible] that the [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] shall prevail against them? It was said by the Lord that [illegible] [illegible] should [illegible] [illegible] a lecturer's blasphemy does not show the popular drift A cycle however dazzling, covers but little space and can't be accepted as the course of nature as a whole

Meanwhile society is feeling the [illegible] power of the Christ spirit through all its [illegible] Not the church alone has the truth to [illegible] It's the pillar and ground of the [illegible] [illegible] in the sight of a [illegible] of God's [illegible] people [illegible] his protection They know [illegible] [illegible] the same article from which I have [illegible] declares there is only a thin varnish of propriety spread over the surface of [illegible] that [illegible] there is no substantial difference between this 19th century and the 10th, 14th, 4th, or even the centuries before Christ when pagan Rome credited all [illegible] for immortality for [illegible] Let us see ! Sergius [illegible] of property till you [illegible] [illegible] Did you [illegible] of the land marrying [illegible] that they may reckon their years by [illegible] calendar but by the [illegible] wives as [illegible] [illegible] Was a woman [illegible] have eight husbands [illegible] at the public auction? [illegible] who of equal [illegible] repudiated [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] wife [illegible] after [illegible] will the enormities of a Caligula [illegible] the bills do we find infants exposed by parents to death from starvation or wild beasts, [illegible] not with the trouble of [illegible] What has become of slaves? At [illegible] the public games of blood and [illegible] that called the populace to long days of savage pleasure If you will have [illegible] days and take the 13th century— [illegible] it is the century of the rise of chivalry the greatest [illegible] with the greatest [illegible] knight and baron and prince, which rendered necessary the defence of innocence and weakness by sword and lance From Dante in his literature, you have among the best, such writers as Petrarch, Boccaccio Chaucer and a hundred lesser lights but even the most glowing pages of genius are so stained with the moral [illegible] of the times that you must keep the books on the top shelf of your bookcase out of reach Or if you follow the suggestion, look at the sixteenth century Henry VIII is on the throne of England, sacrificing everything to his lustful passion, Philip II of Spain is ravaging the Netherlands and slaying thousands upon thousands of helpless men and women merely for their religious belief, such men as Alexander VI, and Leo X are on the papal throne, monsters of vice and cruelty, with courts that set the example of morals for all the world It was a century out of which arose, and must have arisen a new and better life in the Protestant reformation, the renaissance of art, the revival of literature, and a purer domestic and political life at last, for a worse century, than that [illegible] to be, could hardly have been. It was time for a new age Ah, friends, we may take courage and thank God indeed, to day, for all the bright contrast afforded by our time It is not true that the world is becoming worse It is true that the gospel of Jesus is making the world over, so that the new heavens and the new earth wherein dwell righteousness are already coming to view. We [illegible] so far reaching telescope to grasp this vision with the unaided eye we may look up and around The sun of righteousness is above us, and around us is the light and warmth and life of His glorious presence

We return our thanks to-day, according to [illegible] for the material prosperity of our land, its peace, its harvests, its wealth its health Greater far than these are the [illegible] spiritual harvests that the [illegible] of the Christ has given us To day, when [illegible] evangelical truth of God has [illegible] hearts as never before to day, when [illegible] as Moody is invited to hold revival [illegible] lost and great universities [illegible] to day, when Christian [illegible] over are [illegible] to [illegible] care with thankfulness and [illegible] philanthropy is reaching out to all [illegible] welfare of man we may [illegible] fear The cross of Christ, the pity of the [illegible] heart for a lost world will suffer [illegible]

[illegible] thanksgiving [illegible] sincere and [illegible] for the fairness of [illegible] [illegible] blessings of [illegible] [illegible] that have [illegible] because Jesus has had compassion on the multitude

At the conclusion of the discourse Rev. James H Gregg pastor of the Congregational church, made [illegible] for the [illegible] association A collection [illegible] was then taken up after which the congregation sang God Bless Our Native Land and [illegible] were dismissed with the [illegible] pronounced by Rev G E [illegible]

EPISCOPAL CHURCH

A thanksgiving service was held at Grace church on Thursday morning which was quite [illegible] attended The offertory for the [illegible] relief [illegible] amounted to $ [illegible] The following is a synopsis of the sermon by the Rector Rev A R Kieffer The text was the 10th verse of 145th psalm

All thy works shall praise thee O Lord and thy saints shall bless thee

You have [illegible] here this morning for a good purpose You would have come had neither the president or governor issued their proclamation for a Thanksgiving day For such a service is a religious duty that has been ever recognized by the people of all religions Thanksgiving services for temporary prosperity are probably as old as the race and are a part of natural religion The observance of this day has its proper place, not as a substitute for Christmas but along with it as a day worthy to be observed by a religious people For surely to be recipients of the many blessings of life without any expression of thankfulness to the Great Giver is the rankest ingratitude and [illegible] among all people has ever been regarded the greatest [illegible] There are however those in our day who profess that [illegible] this present life has in it very little of any thing worthy of gratitude, that the ills of life far outweigh its blessedness [illegible] have any reason to object to the appointment of a day for giving thanks Since they do so much to belittle or ignore the spiritual and divine in man we might expect them to exalt, even unduly exalt his present secular life [illegible] point with pride to the rapid increase of all those things which are supposed to make this present life richer and more enjoyable, that they would boast of the [illegible] easy communication between the nations of the earth of the increase and wide diffusion of knowledge, of the progress of art, science literature, of the introduction and multiplication of labor saving machinery of the wonderful and unprecedented [illegible] of wealth Since so much has been done to make this life [illegible] more desirable we might reasonably expect them to observe Thanksgiving day, that even if they did not believe in any God to give thanks to, that they would speak some words of hope and cheer for their fellow disciples of matter But they have no thanksgiving service The burden of their utterances is that life is [illegible] cheerless and unsatisfactory and they debate the question, "Is life worth living?" There are some religious people who take a very unhealthy and unscriptural view of this earthly life They regard it as some thing to be endured rather than enjoyed and the surest way to attain the [illegible] to suppress everything bright and joyous [illegible] life this now [illegible] [illegible] finds expression in their religious poetry, in hymns—many of them very pious and beautiful [illegible] found in the hymn books of all denominations. If there be any curse [illegible] [illegible] who brings [illegible] [illegible] destruction of [illegible] manufactories which send out poisonous [illegible] every green [illegible] man's folly, [illegible] waste, whole regions have been reduced to sterility and literal thorns and thistles If there is any curse resting upon the ground it is one inflicted by man's own recklessness, ignorance or cupidity, [illegible] The old writers had no doubts on this subject, they spake with no [illegible] To them this was God's world the whole earth was full of goodness [illegible] full of God The present life was a rich endowment, something to be enjoyed, and worthy to call forth the highest gratitude The [illegible] employs [illegible] expression to our text, "All thy works shall praise thee, O Lord and thy saints shall bless thee." [illegible] upon all the angels and hosts of God all ranks and conditions of men to praise the Lord and not only [illegible] calls upon the [illegible] the beasts, the hail and snow, the [illegible] and the trees in the air [illegible] the Lord [illegible] [illegible] that in singing [illegible] the ground [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] work and showing forth [illegible] No tiny insect too small [illegible] without some [illegible] aid, but is as [illegible] wonderfully made as we are and has its [illegible] habitation and work [illegible] in vain Nothing is [illegible] it is wondrous [illegible]

[illegible] mystery of [illegible] [illegible] such as [illegible] or hath entered into the heart of man to conceive and can only say with the psalmist, O Lord Thy ways [illegible], Thy thoughts are very deep" and confess that they pass beneath their feet and the clouds above their heads and all things [illegible] God has made do in truth bless and praise the Lord not with words, indeed, but with work, and say to man all day long, Go thou and do likewise"

In former years we have come to this service when our outward circumstances were far less prosperous than now when war with all its terrors was abroad in the land or when pestilence was desolating some of our cities, or when trade and commerce were greatly depressed or when the fruits of the earth were less abundant. To-day we have much as a nation, much as a community, much as individuals to be thankful for to Him from whom cometh every good and perfect gift. May He accept our praise and may we show forth our thankfulness not in word only but in deed Even as all others of His creatures bless Him by doing His will by fulfilling the laws of their nature which He has given them so we can only bless God by obedience to His commandments, by doing what He would have us do, that is living according to the laws of our nature—not our fallen nature but that perfect human nature which Jesus Christ [illegible] image of God, in which image we were made, [illegible] us to be the true [illegible] of man So live at all times according to that, and as we meet this day to thank Him for His great goodness let us remember that is not [illegible] of our life [illegible] that [illegible] to Him but the source of our lives, living according to the example of our Savior Christ, doing not our own will but the will of our Father who is good to all and whose tender mercies are over all His works, going about doing good, feeding the hungry clothing the naked warming the freezing, in a word by living such lives as He lives to see, such lives as He meant us to live lives of loyalty to God and of usefulness to man, our brother, and of [illegible] in our several callings and so we shall be among the works of God which praise Him and the saints who bless His holy name

Russ and Finances

Berlin, November [illegible] The German Gazette in an exhaustive article on Russia's financial condition compares it with that of France before the great revolution The Russian debt is [illegible] 000 000 roubles The interest has risen in a decade from 104 000 000 to [illegible] 000 000 roubles The paper circulation is [illegible] 000 000 roubles, of which only 161,000 000 is covered by bills convertible into currency The Gazette warns Germans to avoid the new Russian loan.

Police Magistrate Severy yesterday fined a man $15 and costs for drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

Miss M. A. Carpenter, formerly manager of the Western Union Telegraph company in this city, is in town for a few days.

Nine applicants appeared at the quarterly examination for teachers which began yesterday morning and will continue to-day.

A large audience and a pleasing entertainment were the features of the concert at the Methodist church on Thursday evening.

About two hundred and fifty people "pulled candy" at the Methodist social last night. There was a perfect crush of people all the evening.

A national bazar under the auspices of the Young Ladies Aid society of the First Methodist church will be held shortly before Christmas.

This evening Jack Davis, Dan Walker, George Woodward and W. Bennett will give an athletic exhibition at the city hall. Admission 75 cents.

Mr. F. McB. Norman will shortly leave for Kansas City where he will reside permanently. His journal did not receive the support that he expected and he has therefore discontinued its publication.

There was a large audience of children present at the organ recital given by Professor A. C. Pearson at the Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon. The children all expressed themselves as being delighted with the entertainment afforded them.

Mr. William Farnum, who has been a resident of El Paso county for the last twenty-eight years, informs us that the 17th of the present month was the coldest day for that time of the year since he has resided in the county.

To those of our readers who are seeking to make good investments in real estate in the west we command the opportunity offered in an advertisement on the third page of this morning's issue. It is certainly worthy of investigation, and is apparently a great bargain.

In addition to the offerings at the union services and at Grace church and the clothing, which was received during the day at the Methodist church vestry, Mrs. D. Russ Wood, president of the Ladies' Relief association, was able through the generosity of private individuals to distribute turkeys and chickens to twenty needy families in the city.

A social was held at the Congregational church last evening, at which there was a very good attendance. The following musical and literary program was presented:

Solo	Miss Irene Barrer
Reading	Miss A. McB[illegible]
Solo	Mrs. W. L. Barber
Recitation	Miss Mary Case
Reading	Mr. W. L. Wilder
Duett	Misses Annie and Bessie Bear

Mr. James McCabe received a telegram on Thursday afternoon informing him that his brother Thomas McCabe had been killed in Idaho territory. He was in the employ of a railroad company in that territory and as the circumstances of his death were not communicated to Mr. McCabe he presumes that he met his death on the railroad.

Mr. E. P. Moon of Husted furnishes us with the following weather record for the week ending November 24: Highest temperature 58°, on the 19th and 20th. Lowest temperature 2° below zero, on the 18th. Highest daily mean temperature 32°, on the 21st. Lowest daily mean temperature 17°, on the 24th. Prevailing direction of the wind, west. Clearest days, 18th and 19th; cloudiest days, 21st and 24th.

Mr. Reuben Berrey has concluded to give his personal attention entirely to the management of the Pike's Peak market. He has therefore disposed of the South End market to Messrs. Fuller & Hopkins, who will take possession on the 1st of December. Mr. Berrey found that his business has increased to such an extent during the past year that he was unable to give it the personal attention which it demanded, and on this account he decided to make the change above alluded to.

The new polo grounds on Cascade avenue were used at the game on Thanksgiving day for the first time. They were so rough that it was very difficult to make any long and accurate hits, but after the ground has been rolled and sprinkled a few times the players think it will be very good indeed. The hard wind also spoiled a good deal of fine play. The teams were Messrs. Timmins, Stedman, Liebig and Wike against Messrs. Lyle, [illegible] and Stevens. The four-handed team won by four goals to their opponents' two. To-day's games will begin at 11 o'clock on the new grounds.

Antlers Arrivals—W. H. Weir and wife, Montreal; O. O. Blower, Albuquerque; Miss E. C. Case, Joliet, Ill.; Miss H. C. Decker, Salem, Mass.; Miss E. E. Hammond, Bristol, N. H.; Miss Capron, Miss Clara Capron, Providence, R. I.; Isaac Hubbell, St. Louis; Mrs W. J. McGavock, Colorado; E. I. Price, R. S. Howell, city; R. V. H. Hansch, D. P. McDonald, E. The first run to the hounds (El Paso County Hunt) occurred yesterday and was a perfect success. The master of the hounds, Mr. Timmins, has gotten them in good order, and they proved themselves to be very fleet. The meet was at the old polo grounds, where by ten o'clock quite a field had gathered, besides a number of people in vehicles. The hounds were cast off exactly on time and quickly began to nose around for the scent, which they soon found and were off in fine voice. Then the scamper began—and a very pretty sight it was too. The field, numbering about thirty-five, including a number of ladies, broke away in a gallop after the dogs and the huntsmen. The drag had been laid off toward the bluffs, skirting around the base, thence eastward to Austin's bluffs, finishing, after a roundabout course, just east of the asylum. The run was long and quick and hard. Of the field besides the huntsmen but six followed throughout, and were in at the finish. These were Messrs. Willcox, Sneden, Liebig, Kissell, Dr. Hazlehurst and Ned Brinley. The next meet will be on next Tuesday morning at the Tenney ditch on Cascade avenue, at ten o'clock, sharp. Those who were too late for yesterday's run will do well to recollect that the hounds will be cast off exactly on time.

I AM TALKING NOW!

A Fresh Line of WRIGHT & Peters' Hand-Sewed Shoes, in Kid and Goat. Common Sense and Modern Lasts.

A Genuine Hand Sewed Shoe for $5.00. They sell the same Shoe in Denver for $6.00.

Another lot of TURNER'S Shoes. It is wonderful how fast they sell. All other makes are nowhere. I warrant every pair.

I have Boots cheap in price but not in quality, and, except in shoddy Boots and Shoes, which I do not buy, will meet any prices. I warrant all I sell. N 27 tf

SPECIAL SALE

WALL PAPER.

Our spring stock of Wall Paper for 1887 is now arriving, and as we offered our Special Sale for 60 days, we shall give our customers the benefit of these New Styles at the same prices, namely

Hand-made Embossed Gold, 75c, formerly $1 00 to $1 25,
Gilts, 25c and upwards, formerly 35 to 50c.
Micas, [illegible]c, formerly 10[illegible].
Flats, [illegible]c, formerly [illegible] to [illegible]c.
White Blanks, 12½ and 15c, formerly 15 to 20c
Brown Blanks, 10c and upwards, formerly 12½ to 15c

To those who have never bought Wall Paper from us before we would advise them to call and see for themselves, for having just returned from the Wall Paper Market in the East, would say that we have many of the latest and most elegant designs that have been manufactured, and as we employ none but first-class help you can depend upon it that your work will not be cut and hacked up by little inferior jobbers unable to work for us. Yours, respectfully,
